dissipated as a result of the outreach efforts, and that the new plan will represent the will of the community.

The consultant, Peter Fairweather, is now in the process of analyzing responses to the Plan's goals as well as to the Slide Show "visceral response" exercise that was conducted during each session. This information is being incorporated into a new working draft that will be presented for discussion at upcoming PZC meetings, all of which are open to the public.

The general sense of Committee members and consultants is that the following concerns appear to be most important to Town residents and thus will be worked into the update:

1. Affordability
2. Controlling taxes
3. Protecting water resources
4. Balancing individual property rights vs. public needs.

Other priority attention is being given to preserving scenic views of the ridgeline, especially along Rt. 209, and boosting economic development, including tourism, with a particular focus on the Town's historic hamlets.

A revised draft of a plan is being developed for presentation to the community during the upcoming outreach meetings. It is hoped that a ready draft will be completed this July, along with a natural resource inventory, which is being concurrently prepared.

Outreach meetings are the public's main opportunity to provide input into the Comprehensive Plan Update. The larger the turnout, the better the product.

Minutes of the meetings are available on the Town website.

Fire Commissioner Vacancy Filled

Mr. David Lawrence has been appointed to the Accord District Fire Commission on an interim basis until the end of 2006, filling the vacancy created by the resignation of Jonathan Blair.

Transfer Station Again Accepting Used Motor Oil

The Town Transfer Station is once again accepting used motor oil after a hiatus of several weeks.

After a new oil reclamation company assumed responsibility for picking up discarded motor oil from the Transfer Station, tests revealed that the oil was contaminated beyond acceptable limits. As a result, the collection of the oil was suspended. The problem has been resolved and the oil can once again be deposited for recycling.

Residents are reminded that they may not add any other ingredients (such as antifreeze, gasoline, bleach) to the oil they bring to the Transfer Station. Tests kits will be used by Transfer Station attendants to insure that the oil to be disposed of is free of contaminants. For more information, call the Transfer Station at 626-5273.

(Grievances, Continued)

Tax Law. These grounds are (a) unequal assessment, (b) excessive assessment, (c) unlawful assessment, and (d) misclassified property assessment. Those who have filed grievances will be notified of the BAR's decision by letter.

The BAR is not permitted to consider any other factors, including a property owner's ability to afford to pay property taxes.

Better Cell & Internet Connectivity?

The Town Board has given approval for a private company, Homeland Towers, to conduct testing in the Town over the next 6 months to determine potential sites for a pole (not tower) structure to improve cell phone and Internet connectivity in the Town. The tests will be at no cost to taxpayers.

Historic Preservation Commission Considers Public Input

Following the 90-minute public hearing on the draft law on Historic Landmark Preservation, its back to the drawing board for Commission members. About 150 residents were in attendance to voice their opinions of the draft. Most of the attendees expressed concerns over the way the present draft was worded.

The Commission acknowledged that additional work and clarification are needed before another draft of the Chapter 22

Law can be again presented for public scrutiny and eventual Town Board consideration.

Over the coming months, members aim for a new draft that will gain wide support of residents. Those interested in witnessing the deliberations of the Commissioners as they develop the next draft are welcome to attend their meetings, which are held every third Monday of the month in the Town Hall at 4:00 pm.
